Hunter's Catch Dawn Ryder

Talon's Trophy By Dawn Ryder Talon is a hunter, a member of the team charged with protecting the outer sphere and its inhabitants. His entire life is devoted to duty and protection. And now, after ten years of preparation and anticipation, a female trophy is his reward. When Chanah inadvertently steps into hunter territory and breaks the law on his watch, she becomes his trophy by right of capture. Focused and with single-minded determination, Talon applies the same dedication to the task of transforming Chanah into his idea of the perfect trophy a submissive who will meet all his sexual needs. But things go awry from the start and Chanah, with her strong nature and reluctance to submit, makes Talon realize that a "trophy" is not the prize he thought it would be. Sexy, feisty, with a mind of her own, Chanah moves their fiery, intense sexual encounters from a battle of wills to a battle of emotions a battle Talon is ill-equipped to wage but discovers the rewards are so much more. Fate dictates her whims on those she selects to join together. Talon may call Chanah his trophy but fate will ensure that his heart becomes her prize. Hawk's Prey By Dawn Ryder It's a harsh world they live in. Tova, a non-convict, is sent to live in the penal sphere with her brother and father after they are found guilty of crimes and her home destroyed. It is the only option for a homeless woman. That, or ostracization by her friends in the outer sphere. Hawk is a Hunter, his job to guard convicts in the penal sphere. A large man, strong, with a rock-solid set of values. A casual meeting between the two sparks an attraction both fight but neither can deny. Like every Hunter, Hawk wanted a female. But his options weren't many and all of them left him cold except Tova. It was a match made to torment him with the temptation of the forbidden. And for Tova, what future is there for a chaste non-convict woman who succumbs to the attraction of a Hunter, when sex is used primarily as a bartering tool? But Fate is often unpredictable. When she strikes, it's with deadly accuracy. Logic never wins when two souls find their matches. Reader Advisory: This tale features scenes of ménage a trois, spanking and voyeurism. Not for the faint at heart, but definitely for those who want to raise their heart rate! Note: This story is set in the same world as Talon's Trophy, however Hawk's Prey can be read alone. Janus' Conquest By Dawn Ryder Fay knew the large Hunter wanted her. It was a fact she tried to ignore even as she felt Janus' eyes lingering on her, following her. But the rumors told her the story of a Hunter who enjoyed domination. Placing her faith in gossip might not be wise but it was far safer than letting her body become his plaything. She refused to submit to any man, and Janus would demand her submission and more. Janus wasn't willing to accept Fay's rejection. Attraction wasn't fair, but in his case it appeared in the form of a female who taunted his every effort to entice her, leaving only one way to gain what he craved, and that was to conquer her. It was an engagement Janus was looking forward to with relish.
