WILDLIFE-HABITAT RELATIONSHIPS IN OREGON AND WASHINGTON is a long-needed upgrade of the wildlife habitat relationships work that was pioneered in the Pacific Northwest in the late 1970s and early 1980s. This excellent study, upgraded with the new information and insights that have become available over the intervening decades, proves a boon to land managers. Further, it will serve as the standard to guide development of similarly upgraded wildlife habitat relationships packages for other regions of North America. Included is a vast amount of diverse information on 593 wildlife species and their relationships with the 32 terrestrial, freshwater and marine habitat types of Oregon and Washington. It includes a photograph of each habitat type as well as hundreds of maps, diagrams and other illustrations. An accompanying CD-ROM contains additional wildlife data and color maps and seven matrices that link wildlife species with their respective habitat types. The 88 contributing authors include experts in many areas.
